Gender: Representation and Stereotypes

1. Examine each idea regarding the "role of women" within an Elizabethan Patriarchal Society. Evaluate and explain whether you feel this idea is still dominant within our modern society today.
2. Some 'patriarchal ideas' about women are still present in today's world across different beliefs and cultures. Looking at A-G, which beliefs do you feel are still common in popular representations of women?

Elizabethan Patriarchal Society

Roles of women were based on ideas of biological determinism: that is, women's roles as mothers, carers, and wives were based on their biological sex and their ability to have children.

Post-Feminist Western Society

In today's society, most academics believe while 'sex' is biological, 'gender' is socially constructed and influenced by time, culture, religion and popular belief. It recognises that 'gender' always changing and shifting.

The screenshot shows a presentation slide with a dark header and a light body. The header contains the title "Gender: Representation and Stereotypes". Below the title are two numbered questions. The slide is divided into two columns: "Elizabethan Patriarchal Society" and "Post-Feminist Western Society". Each column has an illustration at the top and a text box below. A context menu is open in the top right corner of the slide, with the "Open in new window" option circled in red.
